Cover Story

George Caleb Bingham, The Jolly Flatboatmen, 1846, National Gallery of Art, Washington, Patrons' Permanent Fund

George Caleb Bingham, The Jolly Flatboatmen (1846)

October 1, West Building, Main Floor, American Galleries
Considered one of the greatest American genre paintings ever made, this masterpiece joins two other outstanding paintings and two works on paper by Bingham in the Gallery's collection. The Patrons' Permanent Fund made possible the purchase of the painting from the collection of the Richard and Jane Manoogian Foundation.

Particularly well known for his paintings of trappers and boatmen along the Mississippi and Missouri Rivers, Bingham was fascinated with American frontier life. In The Jolly Flatboatmen, Bingham's triangular composition depicts a lively dancer accompanied by a fiddler playing a tune and another boatman who keeps time on a frying pan. The rest of the men lounge on the deck enjoying the music and dance as the boat floats downriver.

Bingham's spirited river scene became wildly popular through the circulation of printed reproductions, including 10,000 engravings published by the American Art-Union in 1847, followed by an additional run of 8,000 from the same plate, published about 1860. Hoping to profit from the original painting's popularity, Bingham completed two additional versions of the theme. However, the original composition of The Jolly Flatboatmen remains Bingham's best-known work.

The painting will hang in the American Galleries in the West Building along with the Gallery's Mississippi Boatman (1850) and genre paintings recently acquired from the former Corcoran Gallery of Art, including Bingham's Cottage Scenery (1845).

Vermeer's Woman in Blue Reading a Letter from the Rijksmuseum

September 19 – December 1, West Building, Main Floor

Organized by the National Gallery of Art, Washington

This fall the National Gallery of Art will celebrate the 20th anniversary of the Johannes Vermeer exhibition, which opened here in November 1995, before travelling to the Mauritshuis in The Hague in March 1996. This exhibition, which drew worldwide attention and attracted enormous crowds, had a lasting impact on all those who were able to see it. Many had to stand in long lines, braving the cold and snow that enveloped Washington that winter.

To help celebrate this anniversary, the Rijksmuseum in Amsterdam has graciously lent one of its great treasures to the Gallery: Vermeer's Woman in Blue Reading a Letter (1663), a painting that was in the 1995 exhibition. This luminous masterpiece, recently restored at the Rijksmuseum, will be displayed in the Dutch and Flemish Cabinet Galleries together with other Vermeer paintings from the Gallery's collection. There it will join, among others, Vermeer's Woman Holding a Balance (c. 1664) as well as Girl with the Red Hat (c. 1665/1666), which has just returned to the Gallery after being featured in an exhibition of "Small Treasures" shown in Raleigh, North Carolina, and Birmingham, Alabama.

Johannes Vermeer, Woman in Blue Reading a Letter, c. 1663, Rijksmuseum, Amsterdam. On loan from the City of Amsterdam (A. van der Hoop Bequest)

Visitors view Vermeer's Woman in Blue Reading a Letter during the exhibition Johannes Vermeer, November 12, 1995 – February 11, 1996.
